1. INTRODUCTION

The National Policy on Education 1986, as amended in 1992, has been the guiding document for the policies of the Central Government in the education sector. The National Policy on Education (NPE), 1986, which was modified in 1992 envisages, inter alia , a National System of Education to bring about uniformity in education, making adult education programmes a mass movement, providing universal access, ensuring retention and improving quality in elementary education, special emphasis on education of girls, establishment of pace-setting schools, like Navodaya Vidyalayas in each district, vocationalisation of secondary education, synthesis of knowledge and inter-disciplinary research in higher education, starting more Open Universities in the States, strengthening of the All India Council of Technical Education, encouraging sports, physical education, Yoga and adoption of an effective evaluation method.

The Government has initiated the process of formulating a New Education Policy to meet the changing dynamics of the population's requirement with regard to quality education, innovation and research, aiming to make India a knowledge superpower by equipping its students with the necessary skills and knowledge and to eliminate the shortage of manpower in science, technology, academics and industry.

2. OBJECTIVES OF GRASSROOTS CONSULTATIVE PROCESS

The objective of the consultation process is to ensure that an inclusive, participatory and holistic approach is undertaken, which takes into consideration expert opinions, field experiences, empirical research, stakeholder feedback, as well as lessons learned from best practices. Traditionally, previous Commissions for driving Education Policy have undertaken a common approach which included the following:

- Top down approach based on setting up expert task force, working groups and/or sub-committees.
- Each group was based on a thematic topic.

- Recommendations were made based on field visits, discussions, conferences/workshops, interviews, limited citizen outreach, special studies, meetings with constitutional leaders and elected officials.
- The consultation process involved multiple stakeholders including government, academia, industry, experts and media.
- The consultation time taken varied from six months to three years.

While past consultative processes have been extensive, they have taken a top-down approach, depending on limited feedback from field workers and stakeholders on the ground who are responsible implementing the Education Policy. Further, they have been thematic based, with discussions being held in silos.
