Maximum Marks: 40

Section A - Reading Skills

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

5 Marks

I have heard nearly as much nonsense about zoos as I have heard about God and religion. Well-meaning but misinformed people think animals in the wild are "happy" because they are "free". These people usually have a large, handsome predator in mind, a lion or a cheetah. They imagine this wild animal roaming about the Savannah on digestive walks after eating a prey that accepted its lot piously, or going for calisthenic runs to stay slim after overindulging. They imagine this animal overseeing its offspring proudly and tenderly, the whole family watching the setting of the sun from the limbs of trees with sighs of pleasure. The life of the wild animal is simple, noble and meaningful, they imagine. Then it is captured by wicked men and thrown into tiny jails. Its "happiness" is dashed. It yearns mightily for "freedom" and does all it can to escape. Being denied its "freedom" for too long, the animal becomes a shadow of itself. Animals in the wild lead lives of compulsion and necessity within an unforgiving social hierarchy in an environment where the supply of fear is high and the supply of food is low and where territory must constantly be defended and parasites forever endured. What is the meaning of freedom in such a context? Animals in the wild are in practice, free neither in space nor in time, nor in their personal relations. In theory- that is, a simple physical possibility - an animal could pick up and go, flaunting all the social conventions and boundaries proper to its species, if a man, boldest and most intelligent to creatures, won't wander from place to place, a stranger to all, beholden to none, why would an animal, which is by temperament far more conservative? The small changes can upset them. They want things to be just so, day after day, month after month.

Q.1 Those who think that animals in the wild are happy are.....

- a. uninformed
- b. misinformed
- c. well-meaning but misinformed
- d. not sufficiently awakened

Q.2 When wild animals are captured and thrown into tiny jails.....

- a. they feel restless
- b. their happiness is dashed
- c. they lose interest in everything
- d. all of these

Q.3 Choose the incorrect statement-

- a. Some people think that the life of wild animals is simple, noble and meaningful.
- b. Animals in the wild lead lives of compulsion.
- c. Animals in the wild are free neither in space nor time.
- d. Animals by temperament are not conservative.

Q.4 Choose the correct synonym for the word 'conservative'.

- a. liberal b. progressive c. modern d. orthodox

Q.5 What message does this passage convey?

- a. Animals in the wild are happy.
b. Animals in the wild lead a simple and noble life.
c. It contradicts the view that animals in the wild are happy as they are free.
d. It contradicts the view that animals in the wild are not happy as they are free.
